National Tour Will Visit Eleven States to Revive Missing Persons Cases

Advocates Are Traveling Cross-Country in 4th Annual "On the Road to Remember" Tour

Wilmington, NC – For the fourth year, volunteers from the North Carolina-based CUE Center for Missing Persons will travel across the U.S. to raise awareness of missing children and adults. The team will be departing on June 11th from Wilmington, to attend their pre planned rally stops hosted by families and law officials across the nation; support from media outlets is needed; CUE will be distributing a trail of CD's, press kits and valuable information concerning those missing, of cases gone cold. Cases that will be featured nationally from North Carolina are as follows, see below:

"After so many years, these cases fade from the public's radar, but for the families and friends of the missing, the nightmare continues – every minute of every day their loved one is missing," said CUE Founder Monica Caison, who is leading the caravan of volunteers. "We are traveling across the country to make sure no case fades from memory; they are still missing and their loved ones are searching for a resolution. They need our help and the community's help to bring them home."

"It is our way to provide the missing national exposure that they have not been afforded, our hope is that someone will feel compelled to come forward and give information that may lead to the recovery of the missing," Mrs. Caison said.

This year's On the Road to Remember Tour will begin in Wilmington, NC on June 11th, ending over 2,400 miles later back home in North Carolina. Hundreds of volunteers will take part in various legs of the tour, which will include twenty two stops in eleven states to promote seventy – five cold cases. Unsolved homicide and unidentified cases will also be featured as various rally stops by law officials.

"Each year as we are reminded of the overwhelming numbers of cases and request that flood in to be featured; obviously we can only take a certain amount," Mrs. Caison said. "The cases we feature are a small number compared to the 850,000 cases reported annually", but I'm confident we will make a difference in those we represent and the nation as a whole, she added.

About CUE

Founded in 1994, the non-profit CUE Center, based in Wilmington, N.C., provides support, services and search efforts to families of the missing. To date, CUE has assisted more than 7,000 families in need. CUE is entirely supported by donations and active volunteers. For more on CUE, visit: <http://www.ncmissingpersons.org/>

About the tour

The annual "On the Road to Remember" tour was created in 2004 to generate new interest in cold cases of missing persons across the nation.

The inspiration came from the case of North Carolina college student Leah Roberts, who had gone on a cross country trip of exploration in 2000, never to be seen again by her family or friends. Leah's case went cold and interest faded until CUE volunteers set out on a grueling 14-day trip to retrace her route to Washington State, where her wrecked and abandoned Jeep had been recovered.

Along the way, CUE leaders met with media representatives, families and law enforcement officials to talk about Leah and about people who were missing from the area. The group met with more than 170 media representatives and families, and the 26-state tour resulted in new leads and movement in at least six cases. The tour has since become a way to keep hope alive for the families of the missing.

Although many missing people are featured throughout the tour, CUE names an honoree for each tour; this year's honoree is Anthony Ross Allen of Arkansas.

Every missing person is somebody's child.

About Monica Caison

Exposed to families suffering a missing person three times before the age of 25, Monica Caison decided take action. In 1994, she founded the CUE Center for Missing Persons, which provides assistance for those who have lost a loved one, utilizing media contacts, conducting extensive searches, and going to any length necessary to locate missing persons, regardless of their age, race, sex or socio-economic background. CUE picks up where law enforcement leaves off.

Mrs. Caison has received numerous local, state and national awards for her volunteerism and tireless spirit, including the "Volvo for Life" award. As a fulltime volunteer, Mrs. Caison is driven to help restore the faith in humanity that family members inevitably lose knowing that someone, somewhere, knows what happened to their missing loved one.
